PART I The Object of Inquiry

1 What is I-language?	3
1.1 Jumping in	5
1.2 Equivalence classes	8
1.3 Partial reduplication in Samoan	9
1.4 Mentalism	12
1.5 I-language	13
1.6 Some implications of mentalism	14
1.7 Summing up	15
1.8 Exercises	17
2 I-everything: Triangles, streams, words	20
2.1 A triangle built by the mind	20
2.2 More visual construction	25
2.3 Auditory scene analysis	27
2.4 Words are built by the mind	30
2.5 Summing up	33
2.6 Exercises	33
3 Approaches to the study of language	36
3.1 Commonsense views of “language”	37
3.2 I-language	39
3.3 The kind of stuff we look at	43
3.4 Methodological dualism	48
3.5 Biolinguistics	51
3.6 And so?	52
3.7 Exercises	53

4 I-/E-/P-Language	55
4.1 Computation in phonology	55
4.2 Extensional equivalence	61
4.3 Non-internalist approaches	67
4.4 How is communication possible?	72
4.5 Exercises	75

PART II Linguistic Representation and Computation

5 A syntactic theory that won't work	79
5.1 General requirements on grammars	79
5.2 Finite state languages	87
5.3 Discussion	94
5.4 Power of grammars	97
5.5 Exercises	101
6 Abstract representations	103
6.1 Abstractness	103
6.2 Abstractness of sentence structure	104
6.3 Allophony	109
6.4 Turkish vowel harmony	114
6.5 Words are not derived from words	125
6.6 Think negative	127
6.7 Summing up	131
6.8 Exercises	132
7 Some details of sentence structure	136
7.1 Basic syntactic categories	136
7.2 Syntactic constituents	139
7.3 Labels and phrasal categories	144
7.4 Predicting syntactic patterns	154
7.5 Using trees to predict reaction times	164
7.6 To sum up	167
7.7 Exercises	168
8 Binding	170
8.1 Preliminaries	171
8.2 Anaphors	173

8.3	Pronouns and “referential expressions”	181
8.4	Some implications	181
8.5	Binding and wh -movement	182
8.6	Non-structural factors in interpretation	187
8.7	Exercises	189
9	Ergativity	192
9.1	Preliminaries	194
9.2	A nominative-accusative system	197
9.3	An ergative-absolutive system	198
9.4	A tense-split system	201
9.5	A nominal-verbal mismatch	202
9.6	A NP-split system	203
9.7	Language, thought and culture	206
9.8	Exercises	207
 PART III Universal Grammar
10	Approaches to UG: Empirical evidence	215
10.1	On the plausibility of innate knowledge	216
10.2	More negative thoughts	221
10.3	Exercises	233
11	Approaches to UG: Logic	235
11.1	Let’s play cards	238
11.2	Where does this leave us?	245
11.3	Building blocks in other domains	247
11.4	Exercises	248
 PART IV Implications and Conclusions
12	Social implications	253
12.1	Prescriptive vs. descriptive grammar	253
12.2	Negation	254
12.3	Change is constant	256
12.4	Exercises	262

13	Some philosophy	265
13.1	Rationalism and empiricism	265
13.2	Competence and performance	271
13.3	Reference	277
13.4	Essentialism	282
13.5	Mind and body	286
13.6	A view from neuroscience	291
13.7	Exercises	298
14	Open questions and closing remarks	300
14.1	You and your grammar	300
14.2	Retracing the links among key -isms	304
14.3	Bearing on philosophical questions	306
	References	311
	Index	315
